

Alvaro has over a decade of legal experience and previously served as a senior International Business associate at the law firm of Perkins Coie LLP, where he represented early stage, private, and public companies, including domain industry companies. While at Perkins Coie, Alvaro helped incorporate Donuts and served as its outside counsel.

Alvaro earned his undergraduate degree at Georgetown University and his Juris Doctor at the University of Michigan Law School, where he was Executive Technology Editor of the Michigan Telecommunications and Technology Law Review. Alvaro has also studied law at the University of Paris II (Panthéon-Assas) and the University of Havana, Cuba and pursued coursework at the University of London (King's College) and the London School of Economics. Alvaro is admitted to the State bars of Washington and California (inactive).