

Timothy Favia has over 25 years of experience in building venture capital-backed technology companies from inception through initial public offering. A former partner at Fair Chase Advisors, Favia is also the former CEO of mSnap, Inc., where he built the country's largest broadcast-based mobile ad network, and Mediaplex, where as co-founder and Executive Vice President for Business and Corporate Development, he helped guide the company to a market capitalization in excess of $4 billion. Favia has been involved in the funding, development and operation of numerous other venture-backed technology companies and currently sits on the boards of several early stage companies.